

HUMAN TRAFFICKING HURTS THE MOST VULNERABLE IN OUR COMMUNITY – OUR CHILDREN

The Phoenix Dream Center is an Arizona non-profit dedicated to the recovery and restoration of young women and young men who have fallen victim to human trafficking.

Jennifer grew up in Scottsdale but was forced into human trafficking in Phoenix.

When Jennifer first came to the Phoenix Dream Center's human trafficking recovery program, she struggled with whether or not she wanted to keep her baby...but it wasn't because she was only 18 years old.

It was because the father of her child was the man who was trafficking her.

She was just 16 years old when this predator first found her - he was a friend of a friend. He seemed so nice at the time. She was a sophomore in high school and this man was in his twenties.

"He treated me really well...taking me out, buying me things, showing me lots of affection. I felt special getting the attention of an older man."

Her fairytale soon turned into a nightmare and Jennifer was violated in unimaginable ways. In the blink of an eye, she found herself in a completely unbearable situation as she was forced into sex trafficking. For two long years, the abuse and the secrets and the lies continued to rule her life.

"There were always promises that he made...followed by threats. I was scared to tell anyone."

Jennifer was trapped and desperate. She was starting to feel like there was no way out. There was no way for the insanity to stop.

One night, when the police were called for an incident, they brought her to the Phoenix Dream Center.

"At first, I struggled because I found out I was pregnant and every time I thought about my baby, I felt so much anger and hatred because of who her father was."

She gave birth to a beautiful baby girl and is now finishing up her high school diploma while learning how to care for her newborn.

Unfortunately, Jennifer wasn't the only female who was being trafficked by her abuser. There were other women, too...teenage girls, just like her.
